

Travis Pfannenstiel and Chelsey Gillogly of Hays Serve as Congressional Interns in Moran's Offices

HAYS - Congressman Jerry Moran today announced that Travis Pfannenstiel and Chelsey Gillogly are serving as congressional interns in his offices. Pfannenstiel is working in Moran's Washington, D.C., office and Gillogly in Moran's Hays office. Pfannenstiel, formerly of Hays, is a 2006 graduate of Maize High School. Gillogly is a 2003 graduate of Hays High School.

"Congressional internships are a great way for students to serve their state and learn more about our government," Moran said. "Travis and Chelsey are doing good work for Kansans and seeing firsthand how concerns are addressed at the federal level."

Pfannenstiel will be a junior at Kansas State University this fall where he is studying political science. He maintains a perfect grade point average alongside his involvement in Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity and College Republicans. After K-State, Pfannenstiel plans to pursue a career in public service.

"As a Kansan, I am honored to have the opportunity to serve my state and work with Congressman Moran and his staff," Pfannenstiel said.

Gillogly graduated from Fort Hays State University (FHSU) in May where she studied organizational leadership and political science. During her senior year at FHSU, she served as student body president. Among her duties, Gillogly represented the university to the Kansas Board of Regents. She was also a member of Tigers in Service and the American Democracy Project. Gillogly is a lifetime member of the national political science honor society Pi Sigma Alpha. She plans to continue working in public service after completing her internship with Moran.

"Service to others can be one of the most rewarding and enjoyable experiences of one's life," Gillogly said. "I am honored and feel blessed that I have been afforded the opportunity to work alongside Congressman Moran and his staff to help serve Kansans."

Pfannenstiel and Gillogly assist Moran with legislative and administrative duties on behalf of the people of Kansas.

Travis is the son of Tim and Kathy Pfannenstiel of Wichita and the grandson of Ron and Pat Lang of Hays. Chelsey is the daughter of Tim and Christy Gillogly of Hays.
